CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—The mad rush of the Cubs was checked by the Giants this afternoon before another crowd which comprised most of Chicago and baseball stricken most of Chicago and baseball stricken a hit of that dimension by the spryness of score was 7 to 4, but the margin of three ball on the first bound. runs by which the Giants overpowered the belligerent ursine beast may make it look as if the victory was achieved more easily than it was. It was a vitriolic and exciting battle all the way, with the Giants showing Lia more forceful and varied attack.

The Cubs, however, never were so far behind that they weren't dangerous, and as Tesreau was disbursing bases on balls with a somewhat predigal hand there was no telling when the Cubs would cut in with a hit or two and flush a bevy of runs. They never were able to do that because Tesreau, wild though his inclinations were was always cool, and he had so much of that effective quality called stuff on the ball that he let the Cubs do only skimpy hitting and was right there with the baffling slants when men were on bases

In the fifth the Cubs popped so many ouls over the stand that Tesrcau had four rand new balls to pitch in the inning. The Giants tried a double steal in the seventh, but Archer bluffed a throw to second and Murray was fooled and caught between third and home. Tesreau sent up six straight balls in the sixth inning, but Doyle and Merkle calmed him with soothing words and he steaded Word admirably.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—Four consecutive singles, following a base on balls after two men were out, enabled the Athletics to score three runs in the eighth inning to-day and snatch a game away from Cleveland by 3 to 1 when hope had practically departed. Up to the eighth Vean Gregg was invincible. With two down in this round, Bender worked Gregg for a pass. Then came smashing hits by Barry, Oldring, Collins and Baker, scoring a trio of Mackmen with enough runs to clinch the contest. Houck started for the Athletics, but his wildness resulted in his retirement at the end of the sixth, Bender finishing faulitiessly.
